Excerpt from Damon Memorial: Or Notices of Three Damon Families Who Came From Old England to New England in the Xviith Century

The settlement of New England in the Seventeenth Century is a notable event in the history of modern times. Bancroft estimates that four thousand families during that century left England for that part of America. He also conjectures that each family "multiplied on an average to one thousand souls; and their descendants are now not far from four millions." These millions are now scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the great lakes to the Gulf of Mexico. Among the early immigrants were three, by the name of Damon.

Among this scattered and thriving population, although intermingled with the millions of other nationalities and races, it is possible to trace out the distinct genealogies of very many of the original English families. This interesting and important historical and genealogical undertaking is now in process of accomplishment. It is estimated that in not less than six hundred of these families, this work has already been accomplished, with a tolerable degree of accuracy, and with the most satisfactory results.
