Restorative Justice: Healing the Foundations of Our Everyday Life, 2nd Edition Dennis Sullivan, Larry Tift

This passionate, impeccably researched essay advocates a radical alternative to the punishment reflex of the criminal justice system -- a "needs-based" model of restorative justice. Instead of defining justice in relation to peoples' "rights" or "deserts," the needs-based model strives to respond to the NEEDS of all participants. Beyond the legal system, the authors would apply this distinctive restorative justice model to conflict resolution in families, schools, workplaces, neighborhoods and other institutions.

The second edition of this well received book (which is more than 50% longer) features a comprehensive survey of the international restorative justice literature and a wealth of real-world applications of needs-based restorative justice. The well-documented case studies range worldwide and include: family/community conferences; sentencing circles; victim-offender mediation programs; an "inclusion" elementary school; post-civil conflict "truth commissions" in two dozen nations; and indigenous reconciliation courts in Rwanda; among many others.

Eduardo Fernandez:

As a scholar exactly feel bored to help reading. If their teacher asked them to go to the library or to make summary for some guide, they are complained. Just minor students that has reading's heart or real their leisure activity. They just do what the trainer want, like asked to go to the library. They go to at this time there but nothing reading seriously. Any students feel that reading through is not important, boring and can't see colorful images on there. Yeah, it is to be complicated. Book is very important to suit your needs. As we know that on this age, many ways to get whatever we wish. Likewise word says, many ways to reach Chinese's country. Therefore this Restorative Justice: Healing the Foundations of Our Everyday Life, 2nd Edition can make you sense more interested to read.
